

Dear Parents,

During class time throughout the month of November, we will be talking about being thankful. I am sending home this Thankfulness Chart for your child to be working on at home throughout this month. Please post it in a place where your child can see it everyday: refrigerator, bathroom mirror, etc.

The assignment is simple, each day your child is to be thinking of things that they are thankful for. These items can be anything they are thankful for, no matter how big or how small. For example, they can be thankful for: a friend was nice to them at school that day, they were able to go with dad to the store, or for their family. It really can be just about anything. Then they can write those things on the chart on the corresponding day.

Please have your child bring this chart back each class time during the month of November. We will be making a Thankfulness Chain to be hung up in the classroom. For each item written on the Thankfulness Chart, we will be adding one link to the Thankfulness Chain.

Thank you so much for helping us to be thankful!

Dear Parents,

During class time throughout the month of November, we will be talking about being thankful. I am sending home this Thankfulness Chart for your child to be working on at home throughout this month. Please post it in a place where your child can see it everyday: refrigerator, bathroom mirror, etc.

The assignment is simple, each day your child is to be thinking of things that they are thankful for. These items can be anything they are thankful for, no matter how big or how small. For example, they can be thankful for: a friend was nice to them at school that day, they were able to go with dad to the store, or for their family. It really can be just about anything. Then they can write those things on the chart on the corresponding day.

Please have your child bring this chart back each class time during the month of November. We will be making a Thankfulness Chain to be hung up in the classroom. For each item written on the Thankfulness Chart, we will be adding one link to the Thankfulness Chain.

Thank you so much for helping us to be thankful!